SOLLY'S PREFERRED CREDITOR
AN IMITATION MUSSOLINI
A TIME TO HANG ON SHOOTING IS DANGEROUS

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright 1930 By King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

The real bad news is now out. Uncle Sam is in the position of Solly Wertheim's "preferred creditor."

His friends said: "I am going to fail, and you are a preferred creditor." Thank you," said Mr. Wertheim. "How much do I get on the dollar?"

"Nothing."

"Then how am I a preferred creditor?"

"You are a preferred creditor, because you know now that you are not going to get anything. The others won't know it for several months."

Uncle Sam knows now that he isn't going to get anything. He is an unusual "preferred creditor," because on top of that information, he is spending more money.

Plans may change, but at the present, plans of the United States in regard to Germany seem to include continuing loans already made, refraining from demanding of accepting any German war payments, excusing England, France, Italy and other countries from all war payments for one year. Thus making it easy for them to help Germany if they choose.

What they will choose depends on various things, particularly the extent to which financial collapse, or revolution, in Germany might injure them.

There was a fair imitation of panic on the Paris stock exchange yesterday, and that sort of thing stimulates action.

French high finance is said to have convinced its government that it is necessary to prevent further disintegration in Germany.

German newspapers print a yarn to the effect that France has demanded the expulsion from Germany of Hitler, a German imitation of Mussolini, leading an imitation Fascist German party. Hitler is alleged to be waiting for this crisis to "throw Germany into my hands," and enable him, leading a combination of German Fascists and Communists, to rescue the Fatherland.

Hitler is supposed to be the "great unknown" that will do for Germany what Napoleon did for France, after the revolution.

The story of French hostility to Hitler is well calculated to increase Hitler's popularity and importance in the minds of unintelligent Germans. But as it happens, unintelligent Germans are not numerous. The average German knows that it would take a good deal more than 100 copies of Hitler to make one Hindenburg.

And the German nation, fortunately, has been educated for many years by the social-democratic party. Among other things, they have learned how to think on public questions.

They will come out of this trouble, for they have science, patience and industry. Billions of dollars are not everything.

President Hoover said America must go to the rescue of Germany and Austria, and stocks went bounding upwards. That happened in spite of the fact that the president's message meant that many of our European customers were

FINANCE CHIEF ASKS CALMNESS AS RIOTS GROW

German Banks Reopen Today After Brief Moratorium

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN, July 16.—The re-opening of the banks after a two-day holiday and the curbing of the purchase of foreign currencies today led the German government to hope it had averted a dangerous financial crisis.

At the same time alarm was felt over the spread of riots by Communists and jobless through a large part of the Reich. At least one person was killed, a number were injured and many were arrested as police laid a heavy hand on attempts to create internal discussion.

Finance Minister Dietrich and a government broadcaster announced the latest measures to instill confidence in the economic structure of the fatherland in a nation-wide broadcast last night, appealing to the people to show "a sporting spirit and get along somehow for a few days more."

All over the land radio listeners sat up late to hear a program that could scarcely be listed as entertainment. They heard that the banks would be open but not for

3 PASS EXAMS FOR PHARMACY

Columbiana Co. Group Includes Two Youths From Salem

Three Columbiana county youths, two from Salem and the other from East Liverpool, will be granted state pharmacy certificates after successfully passing examinations submitted by the Ohio Board of Pharmacy. Results of examinations, held on June 22, were announced today.

Glenn A. Arnold, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Arnold, 806 Franklin ave. and Russell B. McArthur, 1206 South Main, both of Salem, were successful in the state tests. Clifford O. Comm of East Liverpool was the third county applicant to qualify.

Arnold and McArthur graduated from Salem High school, the former in 1926 and the latter in 1927. Arnold graduated from Ohio State university while McArthur graduated from Western Reserve Pharmacy school at Cleveland.

The Ohio board granted certificates to 132 students out of a total of 163 taking examinations last June.

BOARD TO THIN OUT CANDIDATES FOR SCHOOL JOB

Decide to Act Tonight As List Continues To Grow

REGULAR SESSION ON MONDAY, AUG. 3

Budget Hearing, However, Will Be Held Off Until Aug. 21

Applications of more than two score educators, seeking the appointment as superintendent of Salem public schools, will be studied at a special meeting of the board of education in its rooms at the high school building at 7:30 tonight.

List To Be Slashed

Plans for the meeting were announced this morning by Clerk Albert Hayes after board members considering the unusually large number of applications, had decided to hold the session for the purpose of eliminating as many as possible to bring about the appointment at the earliest possible moment.

Tonight's meeting will be held expressly for discussion of the superintendent's post, made vacant by the death of John S. Alan. It was originally called for a public hearing on the 1932 school budget, but the hearing was postponed and will be held at 7:30 p. m. next Tuesday.

Hayes said board members hope to cut down the list of aspirants to the post to a minimum tonight in order to permit the successful candidate as much time as possible in completing plans for the opening of schools in September.

Next Meeting Aug. 3.

The board's next regular meeting is scheduled Monday, August 3. Whether a successor to Alan will be appointed at that time or prior to that date board members as yet are unable to predict. Applications have been received from educators from almost every section of the state.

Avoidance of wage cuts during 1931 was urged by W. A. Sheaffer, president of the W. A. Sheaffer Pen Company of Port Madison, Pa., in a statement issued at Chicago upon his return from an extensive sales trip through the United States and Europe. Mr. Sheaffer asserted that if wages stay up at present levels during 1931 there is an era of prosperity ahead for the United States that will surpass any this country has ever known.

STARK COUNTY JURY TO PROBE FATAL GUN BOUT

Coroner Will File First Degree Murder Charges

ALLIANCE, July 16.—Prosecuting Attorney James M. Augst has announced that the Stark county grand jury will assemble Monday, July 27 to investigate the battle with chicken thieves in which one thief and a farmer lost their lives on the farm of George Wallace, south of Alliance, last Thursday night.

Files Charges
Coroner T. C. McQuate is filing first degree murder affidavits against William Reese and Ernest Tinker, Alliance negroes, who were taken into custody within two hours after the shooting. Both have confessed to visiting the Wallace home that night for the stealing of chickens, but neither has admitted the shooting. Tinker has blamed John Johnson, colored, who succumbed to wounds received from a farmer's gun, for firing the shots which later caused the death of George McPeck, a farm hand on Wallace's farm.

Johnson gave a dying statement in which he named Tinker as the gunman. Tinker was traced through the license number on his automobile. Johnson also named Reese as an accomplice in the chicken stealing, but Reese has denied being present when the shooting occurred.

Surprise Thieves
McPeck, George Wallace and his son, Olen, surprised two of the negroes in the chicken coop located on the north side of the Homeworth road, east of Yeagley's Corners. The son was shot only in the hand but Wallace suffered a wound in the left lung. His condition was reported unchanged at the City hospital Wednesday. McPeck died Sunday morning.

When the farmers reached the coop, they commanded those in it to throw up their hands. One was reported to have done so, while the other opened fire. As one of the negroes was crawling over a fence, one of the farmers shot, inflicting wounds which proved fatal.

Tinker and Reese were arrested by Alliance police, who aided by deputy sheriffs, grilling them. Tinker is to be questioned further regarding other possible unlawful activities.

(By Associated Press)

BUDAPEST, HUNGARY, July 16.—Captain George Endres and Captain Alexander Magyar landed the trans-Atlantic monoplane "Justice For Hungary" late today.

BUDAPEST HUNGARY, July 16.—The Hungarian fliers, Captain Alexander Magyar and Captain George Endres, bringing "Justice For Hungary" across the trans-Atlantic air lanes, were awaited hopefully today by thousands of their countrymen.

Trains Bring Hundreds
Special trains were transporting hundreds to Matyasfold airfield where the airmen were expected this afternoon. Aviation experts were inclined to believe, however, that the flight would not be non-stop on account of the distance overland from the Atlantic.

Hopes ran high on the basis of reassuring weather reports from the meteorological all over the North Atlantic. But reports of poor visibility and low-hanging clouds over Ireland gave rise to fears that the airmen might lose their way. Radio amateurs were tuned in on a 600 meter wave-length to pick up their signals.

Plan Auto Ride

The official welcoming committee, modelling its plans on the American style, has arranged to take the fliers by automobile along the principal streets of Budapest to the city hall. This is an honor which never has been granted before.

Palmer plans to hold a conference with the applicant he will recommend either Thursday or Friday, previous to the board meeting.

Two other appointments will also be effected. One will be the selection of a teacher in commercial subjects while the second will be for a successor to Miss Esther Gee, resigned. Miss Gee was instructor in physical education at Junior high.

U. S. Officer, Ileana's Friend, Wishes Princess Happiness

Yankee, Now in China, Recalls Pleasant Duties As Aid to Rumanian Beauty and Mother As He Hears of Plans for Royal Nuptials

(By Associated Press)
CHINWANGTAO, CHINA, July 16.—When Princess Ileana becomes the bride of Archduke Anton of Austria a week from Sunday at Sinaia, nobody will wish her greater happiness than Second Lieutenant William J. Glasgow, Jr., of the 15th United States infantry, now stationed at a summer camp near this small seaport.

Cherishes Memories
Glasgow cherishes the happiest memories of his short-lived association with the princess and her mother, Queen Marie of Rumania, during their tour of America in 1926.

"That certainly was a pleasant assignment," Glasgow said today, referring to his detail as their aide when they visited West Point.

Princess Ileana is a most charming girl," he said. His attractive features, tanned by the north China sun, brightened with a ready smile. "I wish her every possible happiness."

Glasgow could not be persuaded to talk further. Ever since the news of Ileana's betrothal reached China he has been mercilessly teased by his brother officers, but he keeps his own counsel.

Just what his friendship with the princess amounted to—whether it ended in 1926 or continued to any extent since then—is the secret of Glasgow, a soldier and gentleman from the top of his handsome head to the soles of his polished riding boots.

Of Military Family
Glasgow comes of a famous military family. His father, Brig. Gen. William J. Glasgow, recently retired to enter business at El Paso, Tex., his brother, Joseph M. Glasgow, now is stationed at Fort Bliss, Tex., with the 8th cavalry.

Glasgow is 26 years old. He was educated in Washington and Brussels. He lives with two sisters in a rented bungalow here.

Yesterday the sheriff was notified that the entire stock had been taken from the filling station. The loss was estimated at close to $500.

DEEENSE RESTS AS PROSECUTOR DENIES COUNTS

No Decision Until After Action On Ouster Petition

LATTER WILL BE CALLED MONDAY

Defendant Asserts he Did Not Act As Engle's Attorney

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 16.—

With the defense rested after Prosecutor Ray L. Thomas' denial of every charge made by the state, his blackmail trial was expected to end today.

Common Pleas Judge H. W. Jewell of Delaware, assigned here for the trial, has announced he will not hand down a decision until the hearing on the ouster petition against Thomas, which will begin Monday, has been concluded. Judge Jewell will be one of those to sit in on the ouster proceedings.

Denies Telling Judges
Thomas denied he had told common pleas judges here that he had acted as attorney for Harry Engle, former city traction commissioner and then sought to prosecute him for blackmail. The five common pleas judges had testified that, as Engle's attorney, he had learned that Engle was attempting to use the prosecutor's office in furtherance of a blackmail scheme.

The judges said the prosecutor had made this statement to them when they called a meeting after he had written a letter to city council charging Engle with blackmailing officials of the former Pennsylvania-Ohio Power and Light company in order to collect secret remuneration.

"Led Engle On"
The judges testified that Thomas said he never had advised Engle when his services as attorney ended but had led Engle on in order to learn more about the former traction commissioner's schemes.

Thomas said he believed the judges misunderstood him, for he told them that Engle had asked him to take civil cases and that he had advised Engle that he could if they were not inconsistent with his duties as prosecutor. After the story that Engle told him, the prosecutor testified, he thought it was obvious that the taking of Engle's civil case would be inconsistent.

The defendant said he wrote the letter to city council charging the railway commissioner with blackmail because A. C. Blinn, vice president and general manager of the Ohio Edison company, had charged that Engle was attempting to collect $150,000 for services from the Pennsylvania-Ohio, and Engle had denied it.

SMITH AWARDED GRANGE LAURELS

Mrs. Maggie Taylor To Represent Mahoning In District Meet

Seven of the eight granges in Mahoning county were represented at the ritualistic contest held by the county, Wednesday evening at Greenford grange.

Mrs. Maggie Taylor of Smith grange won first place. She will represent Mahoning county granges in a district contest, including Mahoning, Columbiana, Stark and Portage counties, which will be held in August at Fairmount grange, near Alliance. Miss Marjorie Welsh of North Lima grange is the alternate.

The judges were Mrs. Mark Borton, of near Alliance; Mrs. Sizer of Portage county and Mr. Fuller of Pennsylvania.

Winners in the district contest will go to the regional contest, which will be held in October at Kent, in connection with the exemplification of sixth degree work. The regional winner will compete in the state contest.

Should Be Cheap

CHELSEA, Okla., July 16.—Around big cities nowadays you read of nothing but the plight of Germany and how their finances can't be saved. But when you get out here in the agricultural region you read of what's happening at home.

Another drought looks like it's going to kill off the corn crop. Oats 15 cents a bushel. If food is not cheaper than it ever was then somebody is making money and it ain't the farmer. He can't abandon the farm.

He ain't got enough to move to town on. Some of our optimistic after-dinner financiers of the east ought to try making a living and those speeches on 35 cents a bushel wheat.

Yours,

AN UNENVIABLE JOB

Youngstown has selected its superintendent of public schools. A similar task lies ahead of the Salem board of education, and that it might well be regarded as an unenviable assignment can be recognized in the fact that, according to estimates of board members, approximately two score candidates have applied for the position.

It is an important post. The superintendent of schools supervises and directs the education of the city's youth, children in the early formative stages and young men and young women who are preparing themselves for the more profound problems of life.

There must be no experimenting in a job of this kind, at least of the variety that's likely to prove costly.

Salem schools have established a reputation in Ohio. They constitute a fine educational system; worthy, indeed, of cities of greater population, and, unquestionably, it is the desire of every intelligent person who has the community's welfare at heart, that this situation be continued.

Selecting a superintendent is a job that does not, necessarily, demand extraordinary haste. Qualifications must be considered, and ultimately the duties placed in capable hands.

The board of education can be depended upon to act wisely; but their's is an unenviable job.

MOONEY-BILLINGS AGAIN

Fifteen years ago, in the heat of war time, Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings fell afoul of the law in California. A bomb had burst during a preparedness day parade killing a number of bystanders. Mooney and Billings, who were unpopular with the authorities anyway due to their affiliation with the labor movement, were convicted of murder. Billings was sentenced to life imprisonment; Mooney to death. The latter's sentence, at the urgent request of President Wilson, later was commuted to life imprisonment.

In the years since 1916 there have been enough disclosures of witness bribing and perjury to convince the judge and nine of the ten living jurors who helped send Mooney and Billings to prison that the two men were framed. All have acted, saying that "subsequent developments absolutely demonstrate" the innocence of the two men.

Yet they have languished in prison, the subject of numerous speeches, magazine articles, pamphlets and editorials. They are still there and, as far as can be determined from the adamant attitude of the California supreme court, will remain there forever.

A new and powerful instrument of assistance was made available to the friends fighting for the Mooney-Billings cause Wednesday in a Wickersham commission report on methods of criminal procedure, which contained comment on the case. Though the commission made no recommendation that the case be reopened, it showed clearly by its tone that it did not approve the way in which it was conducted.

This is the most valuable help Mooney and Billings have had. If they ever had reason to hope for release, it is now.

What Others Say

HUMIDITY.
New York has had an object lesson these last few days of what life might be were it not for mountains. Extreme humidity of the earth's air, the experts say, would be the rule instead of a rare exception were the skin of the earth as smooth as the surface of the ocean instead of varied by the mountain wrinkles that have so many effects on weather. It is of the nature of any gas like air to absorb as much water as possible, taking on thereby what weather experts call 100 per cent relative humidity, which means that the air then contains as much water vapor as it is capable of holding at that temperature. Such completely humid air lacks one of the properties most important to humanity. It will take up no further water. Perspiration will not evaporate. The rate of heat loss from warm-blooded bodies decreases. Both comfort and efficiency suffer. An approach to this condition was what we experienced hereabouts last week.

The earth's mountains prevent this by keeping this tendency of the air to gather moisture from complete and permanent seas. On a smooth skinned earth there would be no mountains. The sunlight received in the tropics would be greater than that received at the poles, temperate zones might exist, air currents might drift slowly from tropics to poles at higher levels and from poles to tropics at lower ones, as similar vast currents do drift in the sea. But such majestic movements of the atmosphere probably would be slow enough to permit gradual adjustment of the air moisture so that the atmosphere everywhere would remain 100 per cent humid. Mankind, if any such animal existed, would be very different from today. It is not improbable, in fact, that something like this does exist on the planet Venus, which seems to have no mountains and which certainly has some kind of clouded and probably humid atmosphere.

The earth's mountains save us from that fate. Air currents moving against long, tall ranges like the Rockies or the Appalachians, are forced to rise to clear the rise of land. This rise means expansion. Gas expansion always means cooling. This relatively sudden cooling throws water out of the air, thus causing much of the earth's rain and also causing the even more important change of drying the air. It is this partially dried air, coming down after crossing the mountains, to levels nearer the sea that gives us the day of low or moderate humidity which are the kind that we enjoy. Such forced rises or falls of vast air bodies are believed, indeed, to constitute the only widespread mechanism capable of keeping the earth's air comfortably dry.—New York Herald Tribune.

AT SEA, July 16.—Looking back at America from the detachment of mid-ocean, the fears that have recently gripped us all vanish. Distance loosens the tension. Like many others I was beginning to believe that in 10 years our feet would be bound in rags. Or we would sink again in primeval ooze.

The world seemed in frightful chaos. The ocean has been in the same turbulent turmoil many times but today it rolls smoothly on. So it will be with the world. If I'm wrong, I've been tricked by the soothing lull of this vast expanse or by not reading the market pages for three days.

Furthermore the ship's daily promises that Gloria Swanson, who has not yet made her appearance, will positively be seen in the dining room at least once before we reach Plymouth. Since reading this I have been assailed by a most inebriated and unworthy foreboding. Like this:

The dining salon is filled with its fashionable. Suddenly the clatter of dishes and the murmur of voices hush. Two perturbed footmen open the doors of the grand stairway. Gloria advances daintily. Down five steps—and zowie! She comes the rest of the way in a Will Mahoney fall.

A ship's bar in the evening offers a study of peacocks on parade. There is one glossy gallant whose manners seem to be put on like his monocle. He is a fool for hand-kissing, chair fixing and cuff shooting. And on the ship list his name is parted in the middle with a hyphen.

I met his prototype on the Olympic one sailing but he had an unprofitable crossing and at Cherbourg I advanced him the "loan" of his fare to Paris. Then as on every ship, there is The Gentleman Who Drinks Alone. In a far away corner, he downs innumerable brandies and walks out straight.

As usual, too, there is the loud talking flapper who calls her boy friend for the voyage "Old thing." One of those tweedy English persons who is up at daybreak and does all the routine. A timid pair of Japanese honeymooners. A tanned engineer from Indo-China, etc. The customary ship crowd.

The captain of this barque, J. Blancart, a fine figure of a man, suggesting the viking with the spout of the sea in his eyes, stopped in today on his round of calls. His knowledge of English is almost as limited, if possible, as our knowledge of French. Our conversation was reaching an embarrassingly low ebb when Mrs. Ray Long, who was also calling, was divinely inspired to pass a box of caramels. That made everything dandy. Just try to talk in any language chewing caramels. And did we all chew!

Unable to get into my traveling bag without breaking the lock I found myself shy a black bow for dinner. Yet at the men's shop on deck I not only found a kind of tie I had long wanted but a flint for my pocket lighter, a pad of note paper, a play ball for Billy and a pocket knife. In fact I do not think there is anything one might need but neglect to bring that cannot be procured.

I am told of a serio-comic love drama that concerns a romantic French maid attached to a lady on our deck. A ship's officer sent a bouquet of flowers along with a charming note to her mistress. The page boy mistaking the maid for the mistress, insisted they were for her. Since the maid has been bombarding the officer with tender epistles, suggesting moonlight trysts on the upper deck, etc. It has the makings of an old time French farce.

The ship is pitching a little today and, as the steward puts it, "many are sleeping late." Another way of saying they are slightly maldermish. I made the promenade deck and saw only ahead of me Gertrude Lawrence, a thin vision in lymphish green, struggling to round a turn. After a deep dip quick-stepped me into an old self-swabbing deck, forcing me to fling my arms tightly around his neck for support I decided to call it a day. He might have mistaken my gesture.

Among the second class passengers I notice a Mr. Colt, Miss Horsey, Mr. Mare and the Rev. Pony, but with a ship acting up this way you can't expect jokes.

Tonight I'm 56 try'n to finish this precept in my lap. Whoopee! It's yore ocean fortheskinggag. It'simpply smacking us awle alligily.

PARIS—A cooperative purchasing plan has just been launched in Paris in an effort to combat the high cost of living. The group originating this plan is called the "Privileged Buyers' Association for Co-operative Purchasing," and has obtained discounts for all of its members who present a card. The movement is considered a manifestation on the part of the stores in question that they have recognized the superiority of the American plan of retail selling, that is, small profits on larger turnovers.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Gopeland
New York City

We hear more about health than heaven. To mortal man, surprising as it is, health seems the more important.

But talk about it as we may, we really do little to improve health. In the last analysis, we do about as much to get to heaven as we do to get health.

If it were not for our natural possessions of muscles, nerve and vigor, most of us would be invalids. Yet in spite of all we do in the way of abusing our bodies, we live out the normal expectation. Nature is extremely kind to us.

Really, there are many puzzles in life. Human experience makes us skeptical of the real value of the many things which are heralded as essential to health.

Personally, I am not a bit doubtful of their importance and of what benefits they can give. It would be better for all of us if we could make ourselves observe the simple rules of hygiene. But our memories are short, and yielding to life's temptations is the easiest thing we do. We can resist everything but appetite. Without conceding a thing as to the importance of these rules of living, I wish to turn aside from the usual preachments about health. I want to ask you today what is the most important thing in your life. What is the most compelling factor in your existence?

What you are, how you act, how your heart behaves, how your food digests, what your general well-being is depend to an amazing degree upon your state of mind. Your happiness or your unhappiness determines your physical state to a remarkable extent.

As I study the problems of existence it seems to me happiness is the really essential possession. There can be no doubt, of course, that the physical and mental states are intimately related. Anything that lowers the vitality affects unfavorably the mental condition.

But to an immeasurable degree the state of mind governs the physical well-being. As a man thinketh in his heart so is he. If you can keep that brain of yours functioning along normal lines you will have solved the chief problem of the mysterious thing we call "health."

Cultivate calmness, poise, cheerfulness, contentment and happiness; then you will be fit to 'run life's race and win the victor's crown!'

SECRET PLACES

By Joan Sutherland

Synopsis of Preceding Installments:

Feodor Staire, 36 years old, attached to the British Embassy in Paris, was bored by the modern, hard-boiled young girl until he met Toni Wareham, daughter of Lady Alice Wareham. They became engaged after a whirlwind, 24-hour courtship. They were to marry in October and the Warehams had gone to Le Touquet for the summer. Staire's old friend, Ronald Halkett, had married Toni's beautiful sister Greta about a year earlier. His newspaper work demanded long hours and Greta was much in the company of the Comte Henri D'Arblaye, a wealthy South American who claimed to be a Frenchman. He gave her a costly emerald and Staire saw her entering a gambling club with D'Arblaye. But he did not know that he lost 80,000 francs, which D'Arblaye paid. Greta left Le Touquet unexpectedly one day, saying she was going to see her dentist in Paris. Feodor had been expected at Le Touquet and when he wired that work kept him in the city. Toni, very much in love, decided to see him there. She found him dining with Greta and would not accept his truthful explanation that Ronald had been busy. Greta had invited him to dinner. The next day Toni phoned, asking forgiveness. While Toni was walking at Le Touquet with Maitre Siboux, Feodor's godfather, they came upon Greta, whom D'Arblaye had suddenly taken in his arms and kissed passionately. Greta returned the kiss. Toni warned Greta against continuing her flirtation.

INSTALLMENT XV

"How dare you talk to me like this!" Greta said in a low voice of intense anger. "You—a mere child! What do you know about D'Arblaye? Nothing but gossip and hearsay. He is a very good friend. I will not give up my friend—unless, of course, you intend—yes, Feodor's godfather intended to go to Ronnie and tell him what you have seen."

The sneer in her voice stung Toni to anger.

"Greta, you know perfectly well that I would never dream of saying a word to Ronnie, and if you know anything of men you must know that Maitre Siboux is not the type to give any one away. But you are running appalling risks. If you think it is worth while to run the risk of a divorce and a scandal with such a man as D'Arblaye, well, I've no more to say to you. But if you don't, well, you're playing the fool."

"Indeed," Greta's voice was icy. "So you consider that you have the right to dictate to me as to my conduct? What about your own flirtations, Toni? Have you always been so immaculate?"

Toni flushed.

"No," she said. "You know perfectly well, Greta. I've played around pretty well. But I haven't carried one of the nicest men in the world and then played the fool as you are doing. Ronnie is a dear. He may not be rich—I suppose that is why you're so keen on D'Arblaye—but he is a decent man, and he is terribly in love with you. You're so beautiful that every man falls for you, and it seems to me you can't resist them. But, heavens! You might do something better than D'Arblaye—he's so—"

"Will you listen to reason?" Greta interrupted. "D'Arblaye lost his head for a moment. I do not think he will dare do so again. Please remember that."

Her words steadied Toni, made her realize that she was losing the for an instant she was silent, then last remnant of her self-command. She spoke more quietly.

"Look here, Greta," she said. "I am bound to believe you, but all the same it seems to me you are riding for a fall. For goodness' sake, if you are going to let Ronnie divorce you, let him do it decently. If you choose to marry D'Arblaye, it's your own affair. I am sick to death of the whole thing anyway. I don't see why the last days of my engagement should be spoiled by all this horrid fuss. I'm going to be selfish for once in my life, and I hate D'Arblaye. Sometimes—her voice quivered—"I almost think I hate you, Greta."

Something in the concentrated bitterness of the last words stung Greta. She realized that she was in danger of making an enemy of this young sister, who in a few months' time would be in a position to do a great deal for her after all, what was the good of a quarrel like this? With a great effort she controlled her anger.

"Toni, listen," she said. "I don't want to quarrel. We have said some rather horrible things to each other. You have accused me indirectly of being far worse than I am. I don't choose that you should think these things of me, so listen: I've been stupid and extravagant. I've gambled. I've spent a terrible lot of money, as you know, and Ronnie couldn't afford it, and I—well, I didn't mean to get so deep in debt. D'Arblaye was kind and helped me out. He paid several of my big bills for me. The tradespeople were getting nasty. D'Arblaye lent me money and, of course, I will repay it. That's all."

Her words reduced Toni to silence. She did not for an instant believe her sister. Greta might say what she liked, but D'Arblaye was mad for her, and Greta was in his power—and D'Arblaye was not the kind of man who would risk his own skin to save a woman's reputation. If he had paid money for Greta, he was quite certain to have that money's worth sooner or later, and since he was evidently in love with Greta, the situation to Toni seemed sufficiently ugly.

Presently she spoke again.

"Greta," she said slowly. "I don't want to quarrel either. It's only because I just hate to see you chancing such a lot that I have spoken at all. I know D'Arblaye's reputation. Look here, Greta, wait until I marry Feodor. I'll have a good deal of my own then, and won't have to spend it on myself. I'll fix things up for you, anything you owe. It's only a question of a few months. The people will wait, won't they? You've probably paid a fair amount.

Just for a second sincerity held sway in Greta's heart. Selfish, cold, and heartless as she was, Toni's swift generosity for the moment touched her.

"Why, Toni," she said quickly, "of course I will forget it all, and—was a fool, too. I admit that. I do not owe money now except to D'Arblaye, and it isn't a great amount. It is good of you to say what you will do, but I don't think I'll have to bother you in that way. D'Arblaye is leaving the Rochegards tomorrow morning, so I shall not see him again, and he really has bored me very much. We're all fools sometimes, I suppose. You're lucky marrying the man you're in love with."

Toni gave Greta's hands a little warm squeeze, then went out of the room, and closing the door behind her, stood for a second in the hall, perfectly still, aware that a tremendous burden had been lifted from her spirit. She could enjoy the rest of the stay now—the last week—which would be beautifully free from the incubus, D'Arblaye.

In the room she had left, Greta slipped the bolt and stood perfectly still, leaning back against the door—her mouth tense, her eyes hard—while the resentment she had felt against her sister ever since the betrothal to Staire had been announced, mounted to a hard, unyielding anger. Toni had gotten the best of the engagements, and she herself had been forced into a position of surrender. For that alone she would never forgive her. Going slowly across to her dressing table she unlocked a drawer, took from it a little case, and from the case a small sheaf of bills—25,000 francs: not a great deal of money, but all owed for some months' money for which she was being pressed, money that only D'Arblaye could supply.

Rather white-lipped, she shut up the case again, thrust it away, unfastened the door and went out of the room down to dinner.

The evening of the day Toni and her mother returned to Paris they dined out with Feodor and some friends of his and altogether life presented a very rosy face to Toni. She was kept busy shopping with her mother the next morning, lunched with some people, and afterwards was meeting a friend of her mother at Sirdar's for tea. She reached the tea-table just five minutes before the hour, and stood for a moment at the window looking at the lovely yellow pottery, in which the shop specialized.

"I'll have that for my coffee in the morning," she said to herself, studying a big chocolate pot of deep yellow, painted with flowers. Then she went inside the shop and glanced among the crowd for her friend, Madeline Vincent. As usual, that young person was late.

Toni told a waitress to keep a small table, and strolling to the counter, surveyed the cakes and the sandwiches in their oiled paper wrappers. Just as she had decided what she would choose and was asking for a plate, a tall man came in the door with a young girl, and Toni was aware that in some way this girl was different from those others about her. She was dressed all in black, but her face, which was very pale, was made remarkable by a pair of glorious tawny eyes, and by the bright red hair that curled forward like a question mark upon her cheek. Then the man turned round, and she saw it was Paul Ravel. He bowed in answer to Toni's smile, but made no effort to come and speak to her, and Toni suddenly realized who was with him—no other than the model from whom he had painted his famous picture of last year that had made such a sensation at the Salon. Well, she was attractive enough anyhow, and Toni wished she could go and talk to her, but it was quite obvious that he did not wish her to do so.

As luck would have it, when she and Madeline had drunk excellent China tea, eaten the most delicious sandwiches and generally enjoyed themselves, Ravel had also just got up to go, and the two girls in making their exit through the swing doors, came in contact rather roughly, with the young red-haired model. It was Toni who swung round in swift apology.

"I'm so sorry," she said, speaking her pure fluent French. "This door stuck and then knocked me backwards against it."

Her smile, the quick friendliness in her eyes, attracted Gigi, who was not disposed to be too friendly towards the girls on this side of the river. Indeed, her comments on the sheltered jeunesse filles were apt to be rather picturesque and unprintable. Now, however, she answered Toni's smile by one just as friendly, and shrugged her shoulders.

"Oh, it didn't hurt me," she said. "They are stiff, these doors, and I have not been here before. It's rather amusing."

Toni nodded.

"Yes; I don't come very often either. I think it's great fun, but I would eat too much and get fat if I came here too often."

"The other laughed."

"I mustn't get fat," she said. Then a sudden dare-devilry sparkled in her brown eyes. "You see, I pose for the altogether."

"Do you?" Toni's eyebrows went up in interested delight. "How thrilling! I've often wondered if one really felt shy or didn't. I wish—oh, here's Monsieur Ravel—"

"You know Paul Ravel?" the stranger said, and Toni laughed.

"Very well indeed. He's going to paint me sometime. I don't know how he'll like it. He's painted you often enough. I knew you sat for him, because I saw your picture in the Salon last year. It was lovely. Hello, Monsieur Ravel! I've just been talking to Mademoiselle—" she paused pointedly, and Ravel, frowning a little, pronounced the introduction.

"This is Mademoiselle Gigi Bertoni," he said. "Gigi, this is Mademoiselle Antonia Wareham."

Gigi nodded.

"I know," she said. "I've seen her photograph. She is going to marry Staire."

In spite of herself, Toni started a little. So this girl knew Feodor. It was surprising to hear his name so calmly used. Ravel, however, interposed quietly.

"Yes; Mademoiselle is to marry Monsieur Staire," he said; and turning to Toni he added casually: "Feodor used to come and watch me painting sometimes last year. My work always attracted him. I suppose it is because it is so different from his own."

Darrow Out of Retirement

Clarence Darrow, Chicago criminal attorney, emerged from a three-year retirement to appear at Gary, Ind., in behalf of D. C. Stephenson, serving a life sentence for murder. Darrow is quoted as saying he will receive no fee for his services. Photo shows Darrow (center) with James H. Parker (left) and B. C. Jenkins, attorneys of Gary, all of whom are trying to get the Indiana Supreme Court to review the Stephenson case.

she was attractive enough anyhow, and Toni wished she could go and talk to her, but it was quite obvious that he did not wish her to do so.

"I'd love to watch you some day myself," she said. "And some day particularly, when Mademoiselle Gigi—" she half turned to the other, "is posing—that is, if I might be permitted?"

Ravel made some careless rejoinder and a few minutes later, when he was walking down the Champs Elysees with Gigi, the latter spoke after a lengthy silence.

"She is different—"

she said abruptly—"quite different from all the fine ladies you know, Ravel. I like her. She is what you call sincere. Yes, I like her. I am glad she will marry Monsieur Staire. He will take care of her. They will be happy."

And so Toni, all unwittingly, made a friend—a friend who was to prove her use, and come to her aid in a crisis, as yet undreamed of.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

Place your finger on your Adam's Apple. You are actually touching your larynx—this is your voice box—it contains your vocal chords. When you consider your Adam's Apple, you are considering your throat—your vocal chords. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants. Reach for a LUCKY instead.

Here is what one of America's great scientists, whom we retained to study LUCKY STRIKE'S manufacturing process, says about the mellowing effect of Ultra Violet Rays which are included in our exclusive "TOASTING" Process:

"The effects of this ultra violet treatment on the tobacco have been tested and are found to involve an increase in what is called the 'mildness' of the tobacco."

One of America's greatest writers and editors says this:

"When I visited Reidsville and went through the LUCKY STRIKE plant, I found one explanation for the growth of LUCKY STRIKE. Your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of tobacco is a splendid example of achievement. It is the new order of the day."

Remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America which offers you the throat protection of the exclusive "TOASTING" Process—that secret heating process which expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos, and which includes the extra mellowing benefits of modern Ultra Violet Rays. And so we say "Consider your Adam's Apple". Be careful in your choice of cigarettes.

FASCISTS HURT IN GENOA BLAST

Explosion Of "Fountain Pens" Is Investigated By Italian Police Authorities

GENOA, ITALY, July 16.—The wounding of two Fascist officials by the explosion of "mail order fountain pens" caused authorities to mobilize political police today in a search for the perpetrators.

A bombing plot against leaders of the regime was said to have been discovered several days ago, but efforts to trace the investigators have been discovered several days ago, but efforts to trace the investigators have been fruitless. Postal authorities were working on the case in the hopes of finding a clue in the mails.

The victims were injured when they unwrapped packages mailed them last night. Cleverly disguised as fountain pens, they exploded in the men's hands and inflicted severe wounds. Bombs went off on the docks earlier in the day but no one was hurt.

Fascist leaders were warned not to open mailed packages but to bring them to police headquarters for examination.

close to bankruptcy, and many of our billions, sent abroad, might never come back.

Easily yesterday speculators, badly frightened, forced prices down. They began thinking and prices went part way up again.

The man who has made a wise investment is foolish if he lets it go at this time, if he has the power to hold it.

The wise will remember that everything comes back. What goes up comes down, and vice versa. This country hasn't lost anything, except a few billions of dollars, nothing like half as much as one year's United States payroll. And what we have lost is nothing compared with what we made in the war.

It is a good time to remember Goethe's "Money Lost—Something Lost—Humor Lost, Much Lost—Courage Lost, Everything Lost."

At White Plains, N. Y., striking laborers failed to obey police orders to disperse, and one was shot. Police vacations are cancelled, reserves are held in station houses, with tear gas bombs, and other effective equipment.

If the safety of the police was menaced, the shooting is justified. But it is well to repeat: "Shooting should be postponed as long as possible."

Millions of men in the United States have been idle and in want since 1929, without resort to violence.

Violence should not come from the side of law, order, and prosperity.

At Frankfurt-on-the-Main, 160 European watchmakers are showing their wares. There is a sun dial, 500 years old, from Egypt, and a modern German watch that clips the seconds into tenths. Germans expect to sell that in the United States, where everybody is in a hurry, especially those that have nothing particular to do, on their way from Newport to Palm Beach.

It is too bad that a nation with ability to create such a watch should burn its young men and its civilization in war.

German Banks Reopen Today After Brief Moratorium

withdrawals of savings, that the currency had been expanded by something less than a billion marks, that the sale and purchase of foreign money, and that confiscation faced the bargain hunter who tried illegally to trade his marks for other units.

Urges Coolness

The vigorous, admonishing voice of Herr Dietrich warned against wild rumors and urged coolness and common sense. "Even the strongest government can't lead a nation that has lost its nerve," he said.

Rumors that the printing presses once more were turning out bases of marks were described as sheer falsehood. In fact the reichsbank had resorted to its legal prerogative of meeting the currency crisis by temporarily reducing the gold coverage behind its banknotes to less than 40 per cent, Dietrich said, while at the same time sharply restricting credit, to prevent money from expanding beyond the needs of industry.

It was midnight before the address was finished and in many sections listeners were drawn away from their loud speakers by even more ominous sounds—sounds of disorder. Police and radical elements came to blows in Leipzig, Gelsenkirchen, Inshwerte, Munich, Breslau, Hamburg, Altona, Dresden and Karlsruhe.

Outbreak In Leipzig

Possibly the most serious outbreak occurred in Leipzig where Communists fired on a police lorry and were beaten off with blackjacks, 28 being arrested. One man was killed and another injured at Inshwerte. About 500 Communists fired on police from the housetops of Gelsenkirchen, wounding one officer. Most everywhere the authorities gained the upper hand easily.

Advices from nearby countries indicated that German tourists were having difficulty in getting home because of the loss of confidence in the mark. These in Czechs, Slovaks and Holland were unable to buy railroad tickets and left by automobiles, horse drawn vehicles and on foot.

Yesterday analysis of chemicals obtained from Taylor's home revealed they contained a poisonous substance and the body of Mrs. Douglas was exhumed.

ELLIOTT CASE HABEAS DENIED

Release Of C. S. Elliott Is Asked; Wrong Initials Cause Confusion

LISBON, O., July 16.—Judge L. T. Parr of the court of appeals today denied a habeas corpus asking the release of C. S. Elliott of Toronto, held in the county jail here on a warrant issued in Center county, Pa., charging a felony.

Elliott was arrested in Toronto by Jefferson county authorities at the request of Sheriff William J. Barlow.

Application for Elliott's release was made by Attorneys J. S. Kimble and W. R. Alban of Steubenville yesterday afternoon.

Kimble declared that no affidavit had been filed in Ohio against C. S. Elliott.

It was pointed out that Pennsylvania authorities in filing application for extradition, gave the name of N. M. Elliott and because of the difference in the initials, the attorneys for Elliott asked his release.

Detective Leo Boden left Columbus, however, at 4 a. m. today and arrived in Lisbon before 9 and filed an affidavit against C. S. Elliott as a fugitive from justice.

When Elliott was arraigned before Justice M. K. Zimmerman today on the charge he pleaded not guilty and was held, pending a preliminary hearing, on bond of $2,500.

Appeals Judge L. T. Parr acted in the absence of Common Pleas Judge W. F. Lones.

ST. PAUL LEADS IN ASSOCIATION PENNANT FIGHT

CHICAGO, July 16.—St. Paul and Louisville today were right where they started at the opening of their important series yesterday, leaving the saints with their four and one-half game lead intact.

They divided a doubleheader, the Colonels winning the opener, 4 to 2, and St. Paul taking the second, 10 to 7, while Minneapolis divided a pair with Indianapolis to remain one-half game behind Louisville.

Minneapolis pried out a 10 to 9 victory over Indianapolis in the second game of their doubleheader, after taking a 20 to 8 mauling in the first contest.

Columbus took up a lot of ground on Milwaukee in the fourth place battle by whipping the Brewers twice, 10 to 9, and 8 to 5. The Brews outbait the Red Birds in the second game, but couldn't do much with Parmelee's relief pitching.

SAN FRANCISCO BIDS FOR MEET

Coast City Appears First Choice for Shriners' 1932 Session

CLEVELAND, O., July 16.—The Imperial Council of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine met today to select a convention city for 1932 with San Francisco pledging more than $300,000 to the convention fund and appearing as a first choice.

Whether Chicago would formally submit a bid for the convention was revealed by members of the council as problematized. Officers of Medina temple of Chicago were closeted throughout the day yesterday but did not submit a bid.

The Shriners will stage another "Night in the Orient" at the Cleveland stadium tonight, with circus acts, dancing and fireworks. A torchlight parade last night brought the largest crowd ever assembled in Cleveland according to an estimate made by Police Chief George Matowitz. He estimated nearly 500,000 watched the parade from sidewalks, buildings, and the stadium.

The parade started at 9:15 last night and ended at 12:10 this morning. Thomas J. Houston of Chicago became imperial phtentate yesterday.

PARIS—A monument is being erected in front of the Invalides to the memory of Henri Taine, whose real name was Hippolyte Adolphe Taine. The site of the memorial was chosen because Taine loved to muse in the garden. Taine was given the name of Henri through the whim of the editor of the Revue des Oeuvres Mondes, who also styled him a French critic. He was more truly a great historian and philosopher who enjoyed a considerable vogue in the latter part of the 19th century.

THE DAY In Sports

THOMAS TO COME BACK
THIS "RASSLING" RACKET
MULLINS STILL FAVORED

UNLESS THE UNFORSEEN occurs, Salem softball fans this year will not be given an opportunity to witness a "little world series" to determine what team is the city's baseball champion. Everything points towards the Mullins Foremen's club as title-holder again.

The body-makers have experienced no difficulty in winning three straight verdicts this half, one of them coming with the Salem Hardware as the victim. They have yet to clash with the Colonial Billiards, so far looked on as a dangerous titular contender, but unless the Foremen crack completely, they should pull through with laurels.

The team will in all probability suffer defeat during the final round of play, but a comparison of strength of all ten teams in the circuit shows Mullins as having an edge on the best of them. The Foremen's club has strength at bat, is the best fielding club and has a capable hurling staff in Jimmie Fitzpatrick and Sam Watkins. And, rumor has it that the team will add a third hurler, an Alliance resident employed at Mullins, next week.

ALEX THOMAS, promoter of wrestling shows in Youngstown last winter and 15 years ago recognized as one of the world's greatest grapplers—he says so himself—claims he is going to make a comeback in the wrestling racket. Saying that he holds victories over the best wrestlers in the game's history, Thomas insists that he is neither too old or too corpulent—he weighs 245—to take up the game again.

Alex tells of having appeared in Salem in wrestling shows two decades ago. He also entertained Salem vaudeville audiences with exhibitions of his strength while a member of a widely known stage company as a "strong man." Youngstown friends say Alex was one of the strongest men alive in his palmer days.

Rolling back his right sleeve to exhibit an impressive looking muscle, Alex, says "they're not too tough today. I'm coming back."

Thomas claims victories over Farmer Burns, Fred Beall, Earl Caddock, Joe Stecher, the Zbyszko brothers and many others and tells of winning a match with a Texan after 18 hours of mauling. He says he also held Frank Gotch to two no-decision bouts.

Daugherty was one of the six athletes who were put under one-semester suspension for scholastic failures.

Fishermen at Salem's city hall are telling about a dog which over the past week-end caught giant carp at Lake Milton. The dog grabbed the fish while swimming in the lake and brought him to shore in his jaws.

He is said to be one of the largest caught there this year.

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Penn State's 4,200 students will be offered greater opportunities for inter-mural sports in the 1931-32 term through reduction of the number of 4 o'clock classes on the college schedule.

Rescheduling of classes eliminates the late class for all but about 750 of the students, the college officials announced.

Averill's Error Paves Way for Scoring Runs; Hudlin Losing Hurler

A four-run rally in the eighth inning, started by a fatal error by Earl Averill, broke up a good ball game, ended Willis Hudlin's winning streak that had reached five games and pushed the Cleveland Indians back to an even .500 percentage as the New York Yankees defeated the Peckmen, 5-4, at Yankee stadium Wednesday.

Ruth Starts Rally

Held helpless by Hudlin for seven innings, the Yanks started the eighth with a single by G. H. Ruth. Lou Gehrig followed with a single which rolled through Averill's legs as Earl started the field. Larruping Lou circled the bases and scored behind the Babe while Averill was still trying to catch up with the ball.

The two runs knotted the count at 3-all. Ben Chapman, up next, patted out a triple following which Lary and Reese were tossed out. Dickey was passed intentionally. Sammy Byrd, batting for Pipgras, lined out a single that scored both runners.

You would think, offhand, that such a seasoned campaigner as the 38-year-old Walter "Rabbit" Maranville of the Boston Braves had long since learned not to fall for anything as venerable as the hidden ball trick.

Reds Trim Braves, 1-0

But it was none other than the sprightly Rabbit who was trapped by this oldest of baseball legende-main yesterday as the Cincinnati Reds won a brilliant 1 to 0 pitching duel from the Braves. But for Maranville's lapse, there might have been a different result.

Coming up in the ninth after John Ogden had held the Braves to four hits and no runs for eight innings, the Rabbit singled, went to second on a wild pitch and was in position to score the tying run. Then he forgot himself, wandered off the bag and was tagged out with ease and dispatch by Joe Stripp, Cincinnati third baseman.

The trick putout supplied a fine climax to a duel between the veteran Ogden and Lefty Brandt. Brandt made only four hits off the Boston ace, but scored the winning run in the seventh when Heathcote tripled and crossed the plate on Nick Cullop's fly to Worthington.

Robins Trounce Cards

The Brooklyn Robins came back to square accounts with the St. Louis Cardinals, 10 to 3, when Watson Clark chalked up his seventh straight victory. Lefty O'Doul pounded three card pitchers for two doubles and two singles and drove in four runs.

Kid Cuyler's timely single in the seventh, scored Jake May, who had doubled, gave the Chicago Cubs their second straight over the New York Giants, 5 to 4, and put the Hornsbymen within half a game of second place in the national league.

Larry French allowed only six hits as the Pittsburgh Pirates scored their third win over the Phillies, 4 to 2. An error by Barney Friberg, Phil Shortstop, gave the Pirates two runs in the second inning.

Athletics Win Two

Hank McDonald, star rookie from the west coast, and Waite Hoyt, the veteran right-hander, recently picked up by Connie Mack for the proverbial song, turned in a pair of masterpieces as the Athletics tripped the Detroit Tigers twice, 5 to 3, and 11 to 0. Hoyt held his former mates to eight hits in the first game to win his third straight since joining the A's.

McDonald gave up only three to blank the Tigers in the nightcap. Al Simmons, knocked in four runs with a homerun. A triple and two singles.

The Boston Red Sox divided a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns, winning the first 5 to 4, in eleven innings and losing the second, 5 to 2. Tom Oliver's double in the eleventh with two out gave the Sox their victory, while George Blaeholder's seven hit pitching featured the Browns' win in the second.

Rain stopped the White Sox and Senators at Washington.

Billie Burke and his heavy artillery

Putting stance

Every golfer in the country no doubt would like to receive private lessons from Billie Burke, new National Open champion, but that being practically impossible, here's the next best thing to study. Five grips, stances and swings taken by the Greenwich, Conn., pro in winning the coveted national title, relinquished by Bobby Jones, at Inverness Club course, Toledo, Ohio, are illustrated and explained. Take a long, satisfying look and then try and do likewise. We wish you luck!

KID CHOCOLATE WINS OVER BASS

Cuban Warrior Champion Of Lightweights In All But New York

BY EDWARD J. NEIL

PHILADELPHIA, July 16. — "Kid" Chocolate, the polished ebony warrior from Cuba stood to victory on a modest pedestal, a champion, everywhere but in New York state, king of the junior lightweights.

The Havana news boy scored a technical knockout over Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, before 15,000 of the home folks in the National league ball park last night to rise to the championship heights that had been forecast for him ever since he arrived in New York from Cuba, three years ago.

Twenty Grand After 76 Grand Favored In Arlington Race

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, July 16.—Seventy-six grand for Twenty Grand—if he can do it.

That is the sum the gallant son of St. Germans-Bonus, called the greatest three year old since Man O' War, will earn provided he gallops to victory, as almost everybody expects he will do, in the $70,000 Arlington classic at Arlington park Saturday afternoon.

The race, as it shapes up today, will have seven certain starters with a gross value of $87,400, making it the richest three year old stake in the world. Twenty Grand, if triumphant, will drag down $75,- 600 to add to his 1931 winnings of $134,194. The big three year old already is America's leading money earner of the season.

Twenty Grand rules an overwhelming favorite to win as a result of his impressive work-out yesterday, when he galloped a mile and a quarter on a slow track, in 2:11.

Mate, owned by A. C. Bestwick, millionaire sportsman of Philadelphia, which conquered 'Twenty Grand in the Pre-ness and won the $50,000 American Derby, went a mile and an eighth in 2:06 3-5, Mate stepped the half in :51 4-5, three quarters in 1:18 2-5, and the mile in 1:45. Mate probably will be second choice.

HOME-MAKING HELPS

By Wanda Barton

Buy In Season
 "If ladies planned their dinners in my shop instead of their own apartments, they'd have no disappointments," said the grocer, chalking his head over his order lists. "Look at these. Plenty of demand for a lot of fruits and vegetables that are not even in season now—although I can get them specially for anybody who wants to pay the extra price."
 Of course, the grocer doesn't know the tribulations of ladies who after many days of meal planning wonder what on earth they can cook that they didn't have only a day or two ago. At such times there come visions of some specially pleasing dish that was on the menu a few months ago. And really, it wasn't even expensive. But price depends on seasonability—a trifle which may be overlooked.
 Some of the luxury dishes of a few years ago are now fairly common today. Avocado pears, artichokes, mushrooms, lobster, squash, are in their season low priced enough to be within reach of everyone's purse.
 Similarly, the simple foods become luxuries out of season. Moreover, they are not even so well-flavored because they are either cultivated under artificial conditions, or transporting them is more of a problem because of the season.
 And in all justice to the dealers, they should not be suspected of profiteering if, when filling orders for out of season foods, their charges are two or three times what they were a few months ago for the same articles. Prices change with seasonability.
 It's a saving all around if the housewife who plans menus either does so in the shop where the fresh products are laid out before her, or if she consults the list of what's fresh in the market.

Easy-To-Clean! Test in Buying
 Polly was elated with her wonderful buy—a charmingly painted, wooden daybed that took up only a few feet of wall space, but could be opened into doublebed size. It was very good-looking, and she had paid comparatively little for it. Yes, the bed opened and closed very easily—anybody could manage it.

 Only when cleaning day arrived, and she began to give the couch a thorough overhauling did she feel the first regrets. For although the springs were excellent and the article well-made, yet it was so built that it was impossible to reach into every nook and cranny that might need dusting. The gaily painted sides were all good to look at but the odd apertures made by the carving were sure to gather dust, and what could you do about it?
 Ease of cleaning is one of the tests for every article that is purchased for use. If there are inaccessible corners, exposed but immovable sections, then the article will become a source of inconvenience on cleaning day. Couches, beds and chairs that are in regular use should be of such material that either a vacuum cleaner, or a soap-and-water treatment is feasible. All new devices for labor-saving should be examined for ease of cleaning as well, before buying.
Ware That Shows Stains
 Moreover, some articles should be selected on the basis of their prompt exposure of dust or stain. Coffee and tea pots, for example, should be of ware that shows stains promptly, as well as permitting easy cleaning. Good coffee can be made only in an immaculate container. Coffee pots that are of dark ware may appear to be clean when actually they are not—result, the coffee always has a stale flavor. If the pot shows stains clearly, then they are more likely to receive quick and thorough cleaning.
 One of the advantages of the new light metal saucepans is that they expose stains—and thus insure regular and complete cleansing.

THE HOME KITCHEN

Some Easy Fruit Pickles
 Pickled fruits are a delightful accompaniment to many meats, and it's not difficult to put up a little assortment if one isn't too ambitious about quantity. A few quarts of fruit pickled now and again during the summer will mount up to a respectable collection and add a welcome touch to many a simple Sunday night cold supper.
 Watermelon rind, pineapple, pears, peaches, crab apple are some of the fruits that are suitable for pickling. They should be packed in small glasses—a large number of small jars is better than a small number of big sizes. How big a jar depends on the size of the family. But as pickles of this sort are not usual in flavor, they should be served at consecutive meals or taste will pall. A jar that holds enough for one service should be the right size.

Pickled Watermelon
 Watermelon rind.
 1 tablespoon salt per quart of water.
 3 cups vinegar.
 2 cups water.
 4 cups brown sugar.
 2 sticks cinnamon.
 2 teaspoons ground ginger.
 1 teaspoon ground cloves.
 Soak the pared, diced watermelon rind over night in salt and water. Drain in the morning and cook in boiling water until tender. The drain. Cook vinegar, sugar, and spices together with the watermelon for half an hour, then drain and pack the watermelon rind into little jars. Continue cooking the liquid 10 minutes, then pour some of this syrup over the melon rind in each jar and seal.

Pare Peaches and Pears
 Peaches and peaches need to be pared and their centers removed, and should then be added to the hot spicy liquid, and cooked over a moderate flame until tender. They should not be cooked too long or they will break. Then drain, pack in wide-mouthed jars, continue cooking liquid until syrups and pour over fruit in each jar.

LEAFLET LISTS LEADING BOOKS

Gives Titles of 100 Chosen by Prominent Americans

Books that should be read by every American between the ages of 20 and 45, according to 100 celebrities whose names appear in "Who's Who in America," are listed in the leaflet, "100 Books Chosen by Prominent Americans," which is available for free distribution at the Salem public library, Miss Alice Gladden, librarian, announces.
 Compiled by Goodman
 This list, compiled by Nathan G. Goodman, Philadelphia journalist, has just been published by the American Library association.
 Eleven works of poetry are included in this list as compared with six volumes of poetry in a similar list published in 1924. Contemporary poets named in the selection are Benet, Frost, Robinson, Massfield and Sandburg.
 Since the selection is arranged according to popularity, it is interesting to note that Franklin's "Autobiography," fifth on the older list, is now in first place, while "Ivanhoe," formerly first, has dropped to sixteenth place. "Don Quixote," has replaced "David Copperfield," at second place, while "The Scarlet Letter," is third and "Les Miserables," fourth on both lists.

New Fiction Titles
 As might be expected change is particularly notable in the fiction where recent titles, "Growth of the Soul," "Forsythe Saga," "Moby Dick," "Main Street," "The Bridge of San Luis Rey," "Laughing Boy," "Old Wives' Tale," "Death Comes for the Archbishop," and "The Magic Mountain," replace such old favorites as "The Man Without a Country," "Ben Hur," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Romola," "The Virginian," and "John Halifax, Gentleman." Among the older fiction not included on the former list but placed on the new one are "Madame Bovary" and "Tom Jones."

Exclusive Bailey's Beach Crashed By Eye of Long-Distance Camera

Resourcefulness of Photography Pierced Wall of Exclusiveness Surrounding Famous Resort of Social Celebrities. Intimate Snap Shots of Elite at Play Taken from Outside "Deadline."

BAILEY BEACH FROM THE SURF SIDE.

NEWPORT, R. I.—It is unrefined, but nevertheless true, maxim that there are more ways than one of killing a cat. It is also true that the world is full of resourceful people who spend every waking hour with their mental gears grinding away, working out ways and means of doing things that are generally accepted to be impossible of accomplishment.
 Take, for instance, those gentlemen of the press to whom the word can't is just four letters without a real meaning. A reporter is sent after a story and he gets it. How? That's his business. A press photographer is assigned to procure a picture. It may be some money magnet crowned as closely as the English gown jewels, or maybe the first-born of royalty. It's all the same to him. It's just another "shot," and he gets it.
 Here in Newport, the most exclusive playground in the world, those knights of the lens have succeeded in cracking the hardest nut ever tackled by a profession which thrives on hard nuts.
 Bailey's Beach, sanctum sanctorum of the bluebloods of the United States, hitherto kept inviolate, shielded by an aura of exclusiveness (and armed guards) from the plebeian gaze of the Great Unwashed, is the latest fortress of seclusion to be invaded by the all-conquering cameraman.
 For years the flower of society has disported itself at the ultra-exclusive resort, safe from the vulgar comments of the gossips, the goggle-eyed stares of the curious and the sycophantic simperings of the social climber.
 Press photographers were kept outside a very definitely marked deadline. They could, of course, take all the pictures they wanted of social celebrities going to and from the beach, but when the problem of securing a pictorial record of those same bluebloods disporting themselves, even as you and I, in a bathing suit came up, the bars were most emphatically up also.
 But, as has already been pointed out, can't is an obsolete word in newsdom, so after giving the matter of storming the Bailey Beach citadel some serious thought, Mr. Cameraman provided himself with a telescopic-lensed camera and proceeded to record the goings-on of society within the sacred precinct from outside the deadline.

 This resourcefulness on the part of the photographer has a number of advantages. It preserves his own reputation for getting what he goes after, it presents to the readers of his paper a pictorial record of how the other half lives (something that from the beginning of time has been of prime importance to the masses) and lastly, it makes unnecessary the sometimes ghastly attempt at feigning surprise that society figures feel called upon to make when they see their pictures in the public press.
 Another advantage is that the whole operation is painless as the photographed subjects are totally unaware that the all-seeing eye of the lens is benignly recording their playfulness. And they are powerless to guard against this abstract invasion of their exclusiveness—short of making themselves invisible.

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS PAINT HEADQUARTERS

THE IDEAL PAINT FOR COLORFUL CONCRETE, CEMENT AND STUCCO WALLS

SHERWIN-WILLIAMS CONCRETE WALL FINISH

Sherwin-Williams Concrete Wall Finish for homes and other buildings does two things well: First, it makes the wall tight. Rain doesn't soak in to make the house damp and hard to heat. It prevents streaking and cracking from freezing. And second, you may have your favorite color—unpainted stucco is often unattractive and grimy from weather. Sherwin-Williams Concrete Wall Finish is economical to use—spreads easier and goes farther, no special priming coat is necessary; two coats give a beautiful finished job under usual circumstances. If you have concrete, brick, cement or stucco walls to protect and beautify, visit our store and see the wide range of Sherwin-Williams Concrete Wall Finish $3.40 colors. Per Gallon...

STATE TO STOCK GULFORD LAKE

Planting of Strip Around Water, Concrete Work On Program

LISBON, July 16—Assurance has been given by the conservation division of the state department of agriculture that Gulford lake will be stocked with fish this summer. An appropriation of $37,500 has been approved for this project, and as the item was included in the general appropriation measure signed by Governor George White, the funds available for extension work will be available within a month or so.

It is the purpose of the state to purchase a strip of land 500 feet in width around the lake from high water mark. Land now owned by the state extends only 50 feet back from high water.

Two streets are to be designated around the lake and the ground planted for lease purposes. Those who lease land will have the right to erect permanent summer cottages.

The concrete apron is to be built around the breast of the dam.

County commissioners will work in conjunction with the state highway department and the division of conservation in the improvement of roads leading to Gulford park.

Over 400 acres are now covered with water. The deepest portions reach 35 feet.
